New VoiceThread Interactive Video Commenting

What separates good interaction from transformational interaction? Authentic engagement between people - student to teacher and peer to peer, not student to computer. We're always working to make those interpersonal interactions easier in a VoiceThread.

Now you can insert your comments into a video exactly where you want them. Comments will appear in the video's timeline as a small blue nib, allowing you to see where others have inserted them as well. The best part is that you don't have to learn anything new. It just works.

You also have the option to pause while you are recording and then pick up that same comment right where you left off. After you click on "Stop Recording", just click on "Record More" to keep going.

Let VoiceThread bring your online conversations to life by moving beyond text-only comments. Use your voice, video, and integrated annotations to engage and connect your students, person to person.

You can watch a demonstration at the following link: <https://voicethread.wistia.com/medias/rhmbz3qd3j>

If you have any questions, please contact TILT at tigerlearn@fhsu.edu.
